

What can YOU do to heal a fractured world?
What can you do with this degree?

Who “needs” a Master’s in Systematic Theology? Some people going into ministry do, but Cor Unum also attracts a lot of other people, and by the end of the first semester, cohort members say it is one of their best decisions.

Many people come to Cor Unum saying they don’t know how to share the beauty of our faith, but feel under attack from people who only know it from the news . How do you understand your faith so you can share it well? This program helps with that too.

Here are some examples of ministry-related areas students may pursue with their degree, but don’t forget, we are called to minister wherever we are!

- Parish Formation
- Youth Ministry
- Catechesis
- Parish Liturgist
- Campus Ministry
- Parish Administration
- Diocesan Work
- Chaplaincy
- Teaching
- Spiritual Direction
- Hospice
- Jail Ministry
- Non-Profit Work
- Pilgrimage Tours
- Food/Clothing Outreach
- Mission work
- Home-schooling
- Pastoral ministries
- And more!

Some of the above require additional certifications, etc.

From a recent graduate:

P: I am healing a broken world by pursuing a career in Chaplaincy so that I am able to help to heal the fractures (through active listening and compassion) caused by suffering and loss. I am currently completing my first C.P.E. unit 1 through an internship at Ascension's ALL Saints Hospital and through a Hybrid CPE Unit 1 course offered by CHI Hospitals in Omaha Nebraska.
